Ken Delaney

Managing Director and Partner
Prism Economics and Analysis

Ken Delaney is the Managing Director and a Partner at Prism Economics and Analysis. He is an accomplished management, policy and labour relations professional with a consulting practice that includes acting as the Executive Director of the Canadian Skills Training and Employment Coalition (CSTEC); leading a team of researchers examining labour markets and trends related to the broader automotive manufacturing sector; and advising labour unions on matters related to corporate restructurings, pensions, or collective bargaining.

Ken Delaney's diverse work history includes holding senior positions in the United Steelworkers, managing a private equity fund that invested in mid-sized Ontario businesses, and advising the Alberta Government on its approach to support workers and communities impacted by the retirements of coal fired power plants.

Ken has undergraduate degrees in Economics and in Business Administration from the University of Windsor, and a graduate degree in Industrial Relations from Wayne State University in Detroit.
